Adventure Lab Update

June Adventure Lab - Soo'nkahni Sundial - Utah's 8 Tribes.

Galena-Soo'nkahni Preserve & Sundial | Intermountain Histories

What's behind IKEA?

A beautiful and peaceful sundial monument just off the Jordan River trail to Utah's eight tribes. Margret and other Friends met at the Sundial and completed another Adventure Lab activity on one of the first lovely summer days in June. The sundial has information on each of the Utah tribal groups and preserves the site of an Archaic Indian village, which ground penetrating radar reveals is located under the monument. The little valley had tall rushes bursting with green, the sound of the river rushing nearby, and Redwing blackbirds defending their turf with mighty song.

It was easy to imagine Native American farmers in the Archaic period peaceably farming corn and looking out at the mountain ranges topped with snow.

This site was one several of us would not have known about had it not been for the Adventure Lab. We also found a Geocache nearby and introduced that aspect of the adventure to several.

May Adventure Lab—Wheeler Farm

Nine of us met in front of the activity barn in the drizzling rain to complete the walking tour of the Farm during their Spring Farm Fest Day.

The first site was the Wheeler family home - As we approached, a volunteer woman guide about our age gestured to us to come inside for a quick tour. She noticed Margret's FFI badge and told us she had been an FFI member years ago and gone to Japan with them. It was like old home week!

One of the stops was the blacksmith's shop and we watched him make iron rings and explain how he talks with the kids about making things by hand.

The peacock (male of course) spread his wings for us. Cows, horses, sheep, and pigs were all around. One of the Adventure Lab sites was to find various animals on the carved trees that line the street. After all five sites had been visited we made a beeline for the farmer's market on the grounds for a little shopping (some sat on the rock wall and enjoyed a chat).

The sun shone the entire time we were at the Farm and the rain resumed only after we left - you can credit good Karma from FFI.
